pp. 20. THIRD EDITION, Corrected.

Si quid nice Garmina poffunt!

By Me COLVILL.

Remarkable incidents in this memorable frege, and some very fingular characters peculiar to these bad times, are occasionally displayed throughout the poem.

Remarkable incidents in this memorable nege, and tome very impulsate characters peculiar to these bad times, are occasionally displayed throughout the poem.

The very illiberal abuse and invidious treatment with which this little tribute, inscribed to the memory of such a GREAT CHARACTER, has been all along opposed in the publication, may possibly with the numerous subscribers, with the impartial and generous public, apologize for the unfavourable, but unavoidable, delay of the poem.

The impression will be allowed to be, in all respects, elegant, when it is considered the author has had, from the beginning, to contend with an unprovoked, illiberal, and most unmanly opposition, who drive him into an unnecessary and unconscionable expense.

S A M A R I TAN W A T E R;
For which his Majefty hath been pleafed to grant his Royal Letters Patent.

THIS Medicine, which, from its most extraordinary Balsamic Qualities; hath been denominated The Water of the Good Samaritan, is by far the most excellent remedy ever yet diffusered for all the abovementioned disorders, never failing to give relief, performing cures in half the time commonly required, and even where every other means have been tried in vain. It is infinitely preferable to Arquebusade Waster, or Oppodeldoc for Strains and Bruies, greatly exceeds either Friar's or any other Balsam for the Care of Wounds, heals very speedily the most inveterate Old Sores, and Ulcers, gives immediate ease in Burns and Scalds, and perfectly cures the St Anthony's Five, Shingles, Tetters, Boils, Whittows, Hard Swellings of the breast, and every kind of painful and inflammatory Thamour in a few days. It is also an infallible remedy for sharp scorbatic Eruptions, particularly for that obttinate complaint a Scald Head; in thort, there is scarcely any external complaint in which it will not be found the helt application that can be made use of.

HOUSE of LORDS Monday, May 22.

HOUSE or LORDS Monday, May 22.

THE House net for the dispatch of business, pursuant to its adjournment of Thursday the 11th initiant.

Sis Grey Copper, from the other House, presented the new malt bill for laving a tax upon the private brewery. As soon as the messengers withdrew, Lord Hill bornage moved, that faid bill be read a first sine, and the Speaker (Lord Mannfeld) having proceeded to fix a day for the second reading to Rechingbon rose and observed, that the bill now before the House deserved their Lordships most particular attention. The burdes it imposed, considering the taxes already laid upon malt, was very heary indeed, and, contrary to the prosessed principle of the bill, as stattly by the noble Lord; who introduced it in the other House, would tall most several on the lower orders, may, the most indigent very heavy indeed, and, contrary to the professed principle of the bill, as statist by the noble Lord; who introduced it in the other House, would still most severely, on the lower orders, may, the most indigent of the people. Fleedid not rise to debate the bill in that stage; yet he could not avoid taking notice, that the bill-had no principle, or if it had, that the provisions of it not only contradicted the principle, but were evidently at variable wish each other. For these general reasons, as the bill had no uniform principle, as it contained parts evidently contradictory to each other, both in respect of the quality of the commodity to be taked, the quantum of the tax, and the amount of the drawback or allowance; and besides, as it created a general discontent through the nation; he gave this notice that he would move, that evidence be heard at the bar relative to the shipled matter of its contents.

Lord stilliberage that he had, for his part, no manner of objection; that he understood the bill had been sully considered and canvassed in each respective stage in the other House; and that reasons had been urged fully sufficient to induce the other House to passit. It was reasonable to conclude, if the bill had been liable to the strong objections stated by the noble Marquis, that some of them would have been urged while it was besone the other House. As he had heard of none, he concluded that hearing evidence or Countel at their Lordhips bar could answer no benesical end, but might be productive of considerable delay, which ought as much as possible to be avoided at so advanced a stage of the session.

Lord Stormout said, the principle of the bill, so far from being contradictory or complex, was remarkable direct and simple. It was to impose a unity on the private brewery, which had hitherto contributed but a trifle in comparison to the public brewery. For air from pressing upon the indigent or lower orders of the people, he believed the contrary would turn out to be the case fivery few of that description brewed their own beer, while it was well known that the nobility, gentry, yeomanry, and the wealthy of all denominations mostly brewed theirs. This tax would compel the private brewer and confumer to contribute his share; and even the prover for to people who brewed their own beer would ittli drink both small and strong beer a third or a fourth cheaper than those who purchaied them from the retailer.

Lord Rocking sam replied, that allowing the tax to be a good tax, it was not equally laid; the mait of Scotland paid but 3 d. per buthel, while that of England paid 6 d. This would not be unreasonable, if there was that difference in the goodness, and the value, or market prite; of the grain of both kingdoms; but the contrary was notoriously otherwise, particularly in the North of England, where the grain, of which malt was made, was of the same nature and quality with that of Scotland; he meant the northern counties, particularly Cumberand Stormout faid, the principle of the bill, fo far from being con-of Scotland; he meant the northern counties, particularly Cumberland and Westmoreland. "The duty should therefore be equal, where the quality of the grain was the fame. If it was not, the bill would be fraught with injustice. These counties were not permitted to be heard against the bull in the other House, on account of its mode of heard against the bill in the other. They had no evidence of the fasts stated in the bill; they received no communication to inform them on the subject; consequently they were competent to gain every information relative to the bill, necessary to fatisfy them, that they were proceeding upon good and substantial grounds.

The Dark President of the Council faid a few words, and adverted to two or three precedents, which he said were fully in point, where a monty bill had been brought from the other House, and their Lordships resulted to hear evidence against the allegations contained in the bill. He sikewise observed, that he could not be brought to inagine money hill and seen prought soon the allegations contained in the bill. He dikewice observed, that he could not be brought to imagine the least partiality was ever in ended to be shown to the country alluded to; that the general mair bill had been the guide to the persons who framed the present bill, and he was fully persuaded no other distinction was made in favour of Scotland, than had been made by the

The House resolved irreliance Committee of Supply, and the Secretary at Was moved, "That a sum-mat exceeding 2,418,000 l. be granted to his Majerty, to defray the extraordinary expences of the army for the year 17:0. A long decate entired, in which the exorbitance of the fum was pointed out by various gentlemen, who proved, that it exceeded hy far any vote of extraordinaries in any former war. The receility of retrenchment was urged, and Administration blanced for not being able to make ellimates, according to waith the Committed could write the whole army supply at once, without having recourse to two votes, the one for the ordinary, the other for one extraordinary expence of the army. the army.

Mr Rigby justified the demand for the extraordinaries. The Generals abroad, he shid, were the best, if not the only judges, of the nature of the different expeditions, and were alone able to determine what sums were necessary for the ferrice; and that the furnis, must be greater or lest, according to the expeditions undertaken by the Generals, and mult confequently suchase with the ferrice, it was impossible to form elsimates, consistent with the greater of the ferrice, and the infect of the great of the great was enabled to advance the money by means of great surpluses, which estimated in his bands, and of the pay of foreign troops which continued longer in his office than that of the British forces. But very often he was obliged to advance his own money; and as he sometimes did it upon the warrant of the Secretary at War only, which was not a sufficient voucher, he had no other way to recover his money, than by shrowing himself upon the generolity of the House. Me Rigby justified the demand for the extraordinaries. The Ge-

Last night, some dispatches were brought to Lord Geo. Germaine's office, which came from New York, by a vessel which is arrived at Falmouth. She failed from New York the 16th of April, and met with bad weather.

It is faid that the gallant Sir Charles Hardy, when he found his end approaching, declared he felt no uneafiness at the thoughts of dying, but at the thoughts of dying an unnatural death. How unnatural? cried the doctor near him.

It is certainly unnatural, replied Sir Charles, for an English Admiral to die in his cabbin.

The Spaniards have certainly fent 12 fail of the line and 13 frigates from Cadiz to the Havannah, with 10,000 land forces on board, under the command of General O'Reilley, whom the King of Spain has just promoted to the post of Governor General of Mexico. Four French men of war failed with them.

rung, and great joy was expressed by all the inhabitants of this ancient and loyal town."

Extrast of a letter from Chatham, May 18.

We have had several riots this week in this town and neighbourhood, between the naval, military, and dockyard men; scarce a night passes without hearing of three or four of them being dangeroully wounded, and on Tuesday night three of these desperate wretches received their death wounds in a fray on the fair ground, and are fince dead."

The course of his sleet will serve for them as far as the Madeiras."

Plymouth, May 16. On Friday the Torbay and Shrewf-bury arrived, here in a flattered condition. They were on their voyage to the West-Indies, but about 40 leagues to the westward of the Lizard, in the Bay of Bifery, the former lost her mests and bowsprit, and was obliged to return in tow. Extract of a letter from London, May 23.

"This day, a report prevailed pretty generally, that the Ardens man of war, of 64 guns, was retaken by the Jupiter of 50 guns, Captain Reynolds, in company with a frigate. Should this circumstance prove true, and which, however singular, was believed almost univerfally this evening at Lloyd's Cossections, it will inspire our failors with fresh vigour, and, no doubt, prove a very mortifying check to our naval enemies. What renders the report still more probable, is the station of the Jupiter, which was ordered to cruize about the Azores, or Western Islands, and the known spirit and abilities of Captain Reynolds. The Ardent, it is said, is carried into Plymouth."

Same day, a letter from Mi James Edmonstone, to the Moderator, was laid before the General Assembly, stating, that, from Mr Edmonstone's very bad state of health, it was impossible for him to attend and do his duty, as Subclerk and Agent for the Church, and hoping, from the known humanity and candour of the Venerable Assembly, they would allow Mr George Castricros, whose abilities were well known to the Assembly, from the experience of many years, to officiate for him. The letter being read, the Assembly unanimously agreed in appointing Mr Castractos to act for Mr Edmonstone, as Subclerk and Agent for the Church, till next General Assembly.

The Assembly spent the nost pair of yesterday in prayer, and then appointed the Rev. Robert Mutter, at Kirkendbright, to lecture and preach before his Grace the Commissioner, on Sunday next, in the forenoon, and the Rev. Mr Yesterday died at Glammis Casses, in the 85th year of her age, Lady Mary Lyon, daughter of the deceased John Earl of Strathmore, and grand-aunt of the present Earl.

This morning, about two o'clock, a sire was discovered, in a house in Britto street, possessed by William Prentice wright. The fire had proceeded a considerable length before it was observed, by which means Mr Prentice had the missortune of losing every thing is his hop and house, both misfortune of losing every thing in his shop and house, both being upon the same flat. Providentially the morning was quite calm, to which with the affidance of the Magistrates, fremen, city guard, and neighbourhood, must be attribu-ted the prefervation of the adjoining buildings. Mr Pren-tice had only moved at this term, and luckily had not got all his furniture into the house; but we are informed all his fhop utenfils were there,

Tuesday last, the Town Guard was reviewed on the Calton-hill, by the Magistrates. They went through their various evolutions with much alertness, which must, in a great measure, be attributed to the affiduous attention of Captain. Robertson. The Magistrates were so well pleased their appearance, that they ordered them Two Guineas.

Thursday night, the popular question, "Whether Members " of Parliament were bound to follow the instructions of " their constituents ?" was agitated in the Pantheon. question afforded ample field for argument ; and it would be doing injustice to the Speakers not to fay, that, on both fides of the question, they displayed the most convincing ndes of the question, they diplayed the most convincing proofs of ingenuity, and of being fully masters of the subject. It was determined in the negative, by a considerable majority. From this decision, one would be apt to think, that Lord N—'s influence has as suddenly changed the sentiments of the frequences of the Pantheon, as it is said to have done there of the members of another affernation. bly.

Extract of a letter from Kilmarineck, May 22,

"On Sunday last, it rained here without intermission, and continued all the following night, which swelled the water of Kilmarineck much higher than has been seen for a long time past. The workmen (ansortumraly for them) had just sinished the centres, and set them up on Saturday, for the large arch to be built over the water, on which the stem market is to stand. On Monday morning, betwirt live and fix o'clock, the water came down with such rapidity that it carried the whole off in a moment. The timber, by the activity of the undertakers and the country people, is mostly recovered, notwithstanding that some of it was, by the violence of the current, carried below the bridge of Irvine, and very nigh the sea."

Extract of a letter from Dublin, May 20.

"There is scarcely a week passes, in which the usefulness and activity of our brave volunteers do not appear. The plan fixed upon for seizing the villains who broke into Captain Byrne's house, near Dundalk, was not more wisely contrived than it was vigorously executed. The drums instantly beat to arms; the volunteers, in detached parties, took different roads and bye-ways, and, in the pursuit, detained every person who could not give a good account of himself. The seven robbers, after having divided the spoil, immediately separated, but, in the space of one day, and part of a night, they were all luckily taken, some of them at 30 miles distance from others; some in Carlingsord mountains, and others near Ardee. Thus, by a spirited, well-conducted expedition, seven daring robbers were the very next evening, after having perpetrated the villainy, lodged in Dundalk jail. As there are no soldiers quartered in that plade, the volunteers will have the arduous talk of guarding the prison till they shall be tried. It is, therefore, hoped that a special commission will be granted for a special that a special commission will be granted for a special commission will be

Clerkington,

These lands, pleasantly fituated by the river Tyne, within half a mile of Haddington, and twelve miles of Edinburgh, abound with all the natural beauties that wood and water can afford. They hold blench of the Crown, stand valued in the cess-books at 530 l. 14 s. 2 d. Scots, and entitle the proprietor to vots for, or be elected member of Parliament for the county. The proprietor has also right to the teinds.

Upon the premises is a genteel mansion-house, lately built, not yet shiftled within, consisting of nine fire-rooms, besides the sunk and garret storeys.—The Garden, containing son acres of sine rich foil, is well stocked with fruit-trees of the best kinds, and partly surrounded by a brick wall ten free high, and through the whole length of the garden runs a canal of fine clear water, sourteen feet broad.

The several milns on the estate were lately built, and sitted up in a most substantial manner. The new miln, erected within these ten years at a very cooliderable expence, contains machinery for a meal, slour, and barley miln, and was at first let at 40 l. per annum, although, owing to the prefent general stagnation in trade, it is just now set at 10 l. But, as the lease on this miln expires a year hence, a considerable rise, if not the old rent, may be expected. By tack on the dovecoat-shot, the rent thereof rise 3 l. a-year for the last mine years of the lease.

The planting on the estate is of considerable value. The timber sit for cutting was by a person of skill estimate two years ago at about Scotland.

About 80 acres of the lands are prefently out of leafe, the greatest part whereof are let below 10 s. per acre, and about 50 l. a-year below what the last tacksman paid for them. But, as these lands, and the whole estate, are surrounded with coal and lime, and are so much in the vicinity of Haddington, where there is great command of dung, they are capable of the highest improvement; and there is no doubt, upon a leafe, but these lands presently in the proprietor's possession will set at their former, if not an advanced rent.—This estate, about nine years age fold for 1400 L above the present upset price.

These Lands lie about twelve miles above Dumfries, hold scuot the Duke of Quentherry for payment of 3 s. 4 d. of seu-duty, and are delightfully futuated in a pleasant valley, which is watered by the Shinnel, and sincly fringed with natural woods. Any person fond of retisement, or of the rural diversions of fishing and hunting, cannot be more agreed
